

Ant Gear Formicaria Hydration Instructions

Ants need moisture to stay comfortable in their nest. Our setup keeps things cozy by having water below the nest that slowly evaporates, making the air just right for them. When it's time to add more water, we use a special syringe with a dull tip.

We've marked where to put the syringe on the setup with a marker (check the photo). But don't add water until all the old water's gone. And super important: never let the water touch the nest directly. If it does, too much moisture gets inside, and that's bad news for the ants.

Following these steps keeps the ants' home nice and comfortable without getting too wet for them.

